Dear Hiring Team,

Remote is building the infrastructure for hiring and paying people anywhere — and that ambition needs designers who treat complexity as a product problem, not a UI polish task. I am applying for the Senior Product Designer role because my work sits exactly there: research, systems, and measurable outcomes across international B2B products.

I am a Senior Product Designer with 10+ years in product development and 6+ years fully remote. English C1.

- On DocsBird, I led design from planning to MVP for an international document product — 4-country launch, registration cut from 7 to 3 steps, +45% conversion.
- On Relaunch, I unified a fragmented employee platform (25+ functions, 50+ component system) and helped drive ×4 session time, +40% engagement, and 100% adoption.
- On WakeupWarrior, I rebuilt the interface as a system (35 components, tokens) — −90% styles, ×3 development speed, White Label unlocked.

Remote customers need clarity under regulatory and operational complexity. I would bring the same approach I used on DocsBird and financial/reporting UIs: map the real jobs-to-be-done, reduce step friction, and keep a design system that lets product teams ship without reinventing patterns.

I am available fully remote worldwide (relocating to Argentina) and can start on a short notice period. Happy to walk through case studies or a working session with your team.
